

A tiny wheelchair for a goldfish

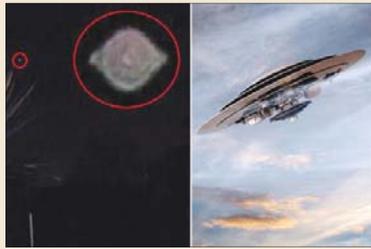

Taylor Dean, 19, currently makes her living creating educational animal videos on YouTube. Her friend, Derek, 20, works at a local aquarium shop. Derek told Taylor that a customer recently brought in their pet goldfish that was suffering from swim bladder disease — which prevented it from holding itself upright, sunnyskyz.com reported. Derek came up with a brilliant solution. After Derek texted Taylor about this crafty solution, she knew she had to share it with the world.

Mysterious spaceship-shaped object filmed flashing in sky

A man has filmed what he believes could have been a bizarre UFO light show, featuring a suspiciously shaped object flashing in the night sky. The apparently intergalactic phenomena were filmed above Gloucester last night — and its left everyone baffled, according to mirror.co.uk. The mysterious orb was spotted by Rob Wheatman, who had a powerful enough camera to zoom right in on it, Gloucestershire Live reported. Rob said: "You can see an orange light moving away at speed from whatever this is in the sky." When Rob zooms in on the light, it appears to be the shape of a spaceship. It is also flashing continuously in a number of different colors. "Unbelievable," Rob remarked.

"So I came out and I saw an orange light speeding away. Just zooming in [on the object] and it appears to be getting closer, and then going away again." Rob was in Elmbridge when he spotted the object flashing in the sky. He told the news site: "I saw it as a sparkling 'star' from the garden in Elmbridge, due south. "What alerted me was an orange light that came from it and traveled at speed north east. "I grabbed my video and luckily it has a 40X zoom and that's when I got the images of the bizarre light you saw."

Lion rescued after falling into well in India

Officials with the Indian Forest Service rushed to a village where a lioness had wandered off of a nature preserve and fallen into a dry well. Villagers in Adsang village, located near Gir National Park, contacted the Forest Service when the female lion was found trapped in a dry well on a farm, UPI wrote. Officials responded and used ropes and the metal frame of a cot to pull the big cat to safety. The officials said the lioness did not appear to be severely injured and was expected to recover quickly.

Man stood on a corner for three years waiting for his mom

Every day for three years, residents of Kemah, Texas, the US, saw a man standing on the same street corner and drove right by him. Ginger Sprouse, who runs Art of the Meal, admits she was one of those people. But one day, she finally decided to roll down her window and ask him why he was there, sunnyskyz.com wrote. The man, Victor Hubbard, told Sprouse he's been waiting for his mom to come back and get him and he has no place to live. Sprouse decided right then and there she was going to help this man build a new life. Sprouse decided to share his story with the world on a Facebook page called "This is Victor".

FACEBOOK

"So, where to start? My name is Ginger Sprouse," she wrote on the page's first post. "I drive by Victor's corner at least four times a day. I listen to people talking around town and keep hearing 'someone needs to do something about that guy'. So, I will be the organizer and I hope that we as a community can be 'someone' together." Slowly but surely the page started to take off. Dozens of people volunteered to help the man, and Sprouse led the charge. She cooked meals, washed clothes, helped him set up appointments with a mental health professional and welcomed him into her home. She created a GoFundMe page encouraging people to donate to help the 'sweet, gentle man' get back on his feet. Within two months, Hubbard received more than $15,000 in donations. Hubbard is currently working in Sprouse's kitchen. "She came around and saved me," Hubbard told KHOU. "She helped me. It's like grace." Thanks to thousands of his Facebook fans, Hubbard was also able to connect with an uncle from east Texas. And last week, he reunited with his mom. Without Sprouse's help, Hubbard would still be standing on that street corner — and Sprouse wouldn't have a valued employee and new friend.
