Bewildered beaver becomes accidental leader of 150 cows

A perplexed beaver who accidentally herded 150 head of cattle across a farm in Canada, has become an online sensation.

"How do we move 150 heifers in Canada?" wrote rancher Adrienne Ivey, who filmed the unusual encounter in Saskatchewan, in a Facebook post that's attracted over 100,000 views, according to huffingtonpost.com.

"Now I just need a better trained beaver..."

She told local radio station 980 CJME Monday that the young cows are curious 'kind of like teenagers'.

The video showed the cows carefully following the beaver. When the rodent moved, they moved with it. And when it stopped, they stopped too — gathering around, but also keeping a respectful distance.

"There was about a three-foot space around him," Ivey told the CBC. "They didn't want to get closer than that."

She told the broadcaster that the beaver was likely out looking for a new place to build a lodge when it came across the cows.

"When we first saw this, we knew that people would get a great chuckle out of it because you cannot get more Canadian than that," Ivey told CJME.

"We talk about how awesome our Canadian beef is, but a beaver leading cattle around? It's the most Canadian thing ever!"

Canadian goose with arrow in its neck seen wandering in New York

Animal rescue groups in New York are on the lookout for a Canadian goose seen wandering the area with an arrow stuck through its neck.

Members of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in Amherst had been searching for the wounded goose for several weeks and said they had received calls about the fowl with the arrow in its neck for about a month, UPI reported.

The SPCA was unsure how the arrow became lodged in the goose's neck, but told residents to contact the association if they spot the goose and it appears unable to move.

"If somebody sees the goose maybe nesting, that would be an ideal time," Gina Browning of the SPCA told WKBW.

"Maybe we can get out there, the goose won't leave the nest, won't leave its eggs, and hopefully we can work to get that arrow out."

Browning and other witnesses said, despite the arrow in its neck, the goose appears to be able to eat and move around normally.

"The goose clearly is flying so when we go out to a place where the goose is sighted, it may or may not be there... It's impossible," she said.

The eagle and the arrow

An eagle sat on a lofty rock, watching the movements of a hare whom he sought to make his prey.

An archer, who saw the eagle from a place of concealment, took an accurate aim and wounded him mortally.

The eagle gave one look at the arrow that had entered his heart and saw in that single glance that its feathers had been furnished by himself.

"It is a double grief to me," he exclaimed, "that I should perish by an arrow feathered from my own wings."

We often give our enemies the means for our own destruction.

Traffic stops on highway for pride of lions

ANI NEWS/YOUTUBE

A pride of lions crosses a highway in India.

Traffic came to a halt on a highway in India when drivers yielded to a pride of at least 12 lions that took a walk across the roadway.

Witnesses to the scene on the Pipavav-Rajula Highway in Amreli, Gujarat, said the lions were stopped at the side of the road for about 15 minutes, appearing as if they planned to cross, until the vehicles stopped to allow the big cats to make their way across the roadway, UPI wrote.

The video shows about 12 lions crossing the road before one turns back the way they came.

Media reports indicate many Asiatic lions in the area have been killed by cars and trains.

Sudoku

Sudoku was inspired by the table devised by Iranian mathematician Khwarazmi. Fill 9×9 grid with digits so that each column, each row and each of the nine 3×3 sub-grids that compose the grid, contains all of the digits from 1 to 9.
